

How Long Does a House Move Take in London?

Table of Contents

- How long does it take to move house in London from start to finish?
- What affects the duration of a house move in London?
- How much time should I allow for packing before a move?
- How long does moving day usually take?
- Does the size of the property affect moving time?
- Can traffic in London impact moving times?
- How long does it take professional movers to load and unload?
- How can I speed up the moving process?
- Do movers in London offer same-day house removals?
- How far in advance should I book a removal company in London?

How long does it take to move house in London from start to finish?

Typically, a house move in London takes between 1 and 3 days. For larger homes or long-distance moves, it could stretch to 4-5 days including packing and cleaning.

The timeline includes:

- Packing: 1-3 days (longer if DIY)
- Moving day: 4-8 hours for most properties
- Unpacking: 1-2 days

What affects the duration of a house move in London?

Factors like access, stairs, packing readiness, property size, and traffic all influence moving time. Booking professional movers can reduce delays significantly.

Key elements to consider:

- Property size and number of items
- Disassembly/reassembly requirements
- Availability of elevators or parking
- Day/time of the move (avoid rush hours!)

How much time should I allow for packing before a move?

Give yourself at least 2-5 days to pack properly. A studio may take 1-2 days, while a 3-bed house could take up to a week without help.

Tips to make packing efficient:

- Start with non-essentials
- Label boxes clearly by room
- Use professional packing services if short on time

How long does moving day usually take?

Most London house moves take 4-8 hours on moving day. This depends on van size, number of movers, and the distance between locations.

Typical times by property:

- Studio/1-bed flat: 3-5 hours
- 2-bed house: 4-6 hours
- 3-4 bed house: 6-9 hours

Does the size of the property affect moving time?

Yes, larger properties take more time to move due to volume and complexity.

Example breakdown:

- Studio: 2-3 hours
- 2-bed flat: 4-6 hours
- 4-bed house: 6-10+ hours

Can traffic in London impact moving times?

Definitely. London's traffic can significantly delay your move, especially during peak hours.

To avoid traffic issues:

- Book morning time slots
- Check for roadworks and closures
- Allow for extra time in central areas

How long does it take professional movers to load and unload?

Loading and unloading usually takes 2-6 hours depending on property size and number of movers.

Typical scenarios:

- 1-bed flat: 2-3 hours
- 2-bed house: 3-4 hours
- 3-bed house: 4-6 hours

How can I speed up the moving process?

Use professional packing services, declutter before moving, and clearly label all boxes.

Time-saving tips:

- Book parking space ahead of time
- Prepare an essentials box
- Disassemble furniture in advance (or ask movers to do it)

Do movers in London offer same-day house removals?

Yes, many moving companies offer same-day removals for small to medium properties.

Same-day moves are ideal for:

- Studio and 1-bed flats
- Local relocations within a few miles
- Clients who are fully packed and ready

How far in advance should I book a removal company in London?

Book at least 2-4 weeks in advance for best availability and pricing.

Busy periods like weekends and month-end fill quickly, so early booking ensures:

- Preferred time slots
- Competitive rates
- Time for pre-move planning

Conclusion

Every move is different—but with the right preparation and a trusted removals company, your house move in London can be smooth and efficient.

Ready to move? Book house move online today with London Man Van and take the stress out of your move.