- ? People with fragile or valuable items
- ? Last-minute movers needing fast service

Who Might Prefer DIY Packing?

- ? Students or renters with minimal belongings
- ? Budget-conscious movers
- ? Those who enjoy organising and sorting
- ? People moving in stages

FAQs – Packing Services for Moving

Will movers pack everything?

Yes. If you opt for a full packing services, movers will pack everything unless you specify otherwise. You can also request fragile-only or partial packing.

Can I pack some items and let movers pack the rest?

Absolutely. Many customers pack essentials themselves and leave the rest to the professionals. It's a flexible solution that suits most moves.

Is packing included in the moving price?

No, packing is usually an add-on service. It must be selected when requesting your quote, especially if you need materials or special handling.

What's the difference between full-service and self-packing?

Full-service includes everything: packing, loading, transport, and unpacking. With self-packing, you're responsible for boxing items before movers arrive.

How much does it cost to have movers pack for you?

Costs vary based on the number of items, type of belongings, and packing speed. Expect to pay between £150–£500+ for professional packing services.

Is it cheaper to pack yourself when moving?

Yes. DIY packing is generally more affordable since you avoid labour charges, but may be more stressful and risky if items aren't packed properly.

Do movers provide packing materials?

Yes, most professional movers can provide all necessary materials, including boxes, tape, bubble wrap, and covers. These are usually charged separately.

What items will movers not pack?

Movers typically won't pack hazardous materials, perishables, plants, or high-value items like cash or jewellery. Always ask for a list of exclusions.

Final Thoughts

Whether you pack yourself or hire movers, planning is key. DIY packing saves money, but costs you time and energy. Professional packing reduces stress, protects your items, and saves time — especially for busy households or complex moves.

At London Man Van, we make both options easy. Choose the packing solution that works for your schedule, budget, and peace of mind.
